Just an Excuse for Port Expansion?

The Lyttelton Port Recovery Plan

Environment Canterbury hosted a well attended community meeting at Naval Point to explain the proposed Preliminary Draft Lyttelton Port Recovery Plan. This draft plan has been compiled from the Port Companies vision for the future and inputs from key strategic partners CERA, Christchurch City Council, Selwyn District Council, Waimakariri District Council, NZTA, DOC and Te Runanga o Ngai Tahu. ECAN is seeking feedback on the proposal. The submission process is open for public comment until May 11th.

ECAN officials began the evening explaining the scope of the Draft Recovery Plan. The plan only relates to Port Recovery. Township recovery and whole of the harbour recovery is not part of this process. Recovery itself has been given an interesting definition. Under the CERA legislation recovery can mean enhancement. That means the asset or area can be improved significantly from its pre quake form. The Port Recovery Plan reflects this. For example prior to the earthquakes container storage at the port was limited to Cashin Quay. New proposals see container storage expanding to the new 37 hectares reclamation.

The meeting focused on key topics identified in the draft Recovery Plan and was held to encourage residents to comment on the proposals. A robust discussion ensued around many of the key topics:

Dampier Bay, the Inner Harbour, Traffic on Norwich Quay, Dredging, Reclamation, the ferry and cruise ships.

Tas Young from the Lyttelton Community Association queried the extent of the 37 hectare reclamation. In his eyes the additional 27 hectare reclamation was just a land grab. He pointed out that there was other land that could be used for container storage. "What about using the coal area that is shrinking in size?" he said.

MP Eugenie Sage highlighted that, "The community can't stop or reduce the size of the reclamation because the Government's appointed ECAN commissioners have made it a controlled activity, which the Council must agree to". She was most concerned that emergency powers should end and normal planning rules should apply immediately.

"If that doesn't happen we risk a major and potentially high impact port expansion with little chance for the public to influence what happens to their harbour," said Ms Sage.

David Bundy highlighted that public space was being privatised in the process.

"Our recreational usage of the harbour was being reduced by effectively taking 37 hectares from the ocean and then creating land title and handing that over to a private enterprise which could easily be on sold"

Two ideas for cruise ship berths are proposed in the plan, one on the seaward side of the Oil Terminal and the other at Gladstone Quay. The Oil Terminal location is the preferred location of the Port Company. Resident Sue Stubenvoll highlighted that the land adjacent to the proposed wharf is public land and currently the fishing wharf is located there. Would this land also be taken from public use? She queried if that happened what could the public get in return? Could port land beside Urumau Reserve be gifted back to the community? Others queried the impact this would have on operations of Naval Point Club.

Craig Edwards representing the Naval Point Club had several points of clarification. He wondered if the recreational land around the Club formed part of the proposed plan. He was assured that the City Council would control all the activities for that area. ECAN representatives explained the Naval Point Area was not held to be within the plan zone as the Recovery Plan is really a tool to change the Resource Management Act. Craig also raised the issue of new zoning proposed for the cliffs adjacent to the area. Under the new district plan there is to be a 60 metre exclusion zone. How did that impact on the development of Dampier Bay? He highlighted that the plan also proposes that Dampier Bay not be developed into as large a precinct as originally envisaged by the Port Company. The plan seeks to protect recovery for the existing Lyttelton businesses. He was also interested in whether a new break water would be built? Currently ECAN wasn't sure if this was in the Port Company plan however they assured the audience that if a breakwater was built it needed to be within the 37 hectare envelope and that would mean the reclamation area would have to be smaller.

Further complications were highlighted by the Inner Harbour Moorings Association about historic features of the Port. Features that were pre 1900 need heritage protection and these assets are both on land and in the sea. What protection was there for assets after 1900? What was ECAN's criteria for heritage and who controlled what? ECAN representatives stated they were responsible for notified historic assets in the sea and they stated that removal of the historic pile moorings under this draft was a permitted activity in the plan.

Juliet Neill queried where all the fill would come from?. It seems quite a coincidence that the project ties in rather nicely with the other CERA project the re-opening of Sumner Road. Officials stated the Sumner Road project and Gollans Bay Quarry would be the source of much of the fill.

Waharoa Blessed Square Complete

The new entrance to Albion Square was blessed on Saturday April 18th. A good crowd enjoyed the moment. Designer and carver Caine Tauwhare briefly told the story behind the design and naturally it reflects the seafaring nature of our place.

The two tall poles are shaped to reflect a waka, the vessel used to transport people back wards and forwards to this area. Intricate shapes are carved into the waka poles. Take a closer look and you will see a fishing net. This symbolises people coming together.

Caine said, " The fish hook represents responsibilities and opportunities". He then told the story that the first fish caught is always given back to the sea.

"That is to remind people not to take everything so that fish stocks can be replenished"

The anchor was there to reflect grounding. The carving has so many symbols embedded within. There is a whale tail that represents two different people coming together and learning,

There is much to be learnt from the symbolism of the carving.

There were also many words of thanks for the people who enabled the project to happen. The square is now complete for the people of Lyttelton Harbour and the visitors to our area to enjoy.

The plan proposes that the Lyttelton Town Centre zoning classification remain along both sides of Norwich Quay. Heather Bundy raised some interesting points. "How is the Port Company allowed to continue logging operations in that area if that is the designation" she said. Officials explained the plan allows for ten years of port activity to remain as part of the recovery process. After that period the land would be returned for town centre usage.

The Draft Port Recovery Plan poses so many questions. We haven't even touched on visual impact, environmental impacts, the justification for such a large re-development. If you want further clarity you can speak to ECAN officials at the Portacabin drop in box on the corner of London and Oxford Streets. Its open 10-2pm on Thursday and 10-12.30 on Saturday. You are then encouraged to share your views via submission. Submissions are open until 5pm May 11.

WIND PROJECT

Please donate to our wind turbine project

Do you love free electricity? We do.

The team at Orton Bradley Park would much rather spend money to increase the awesomeness of our facilities than pay another power bill. With your help we can. By installing a wind turbine to generate electricity, Orton Bradley Park will dramatically reduce our power bills and dependence on the grid.

How it works

Your donation will help purchase a small-scale wind turbine for Orton Bradley Park. The turbine has an onboard generator that converts wind energy into electricity. This power is used by lights and electric appliances throughout the park. Any excess electricity produced by the turbine is sold back to the grid.

Site

The knoll behind the Mill House. Windflow modelling suggests there is an abundance of wind.

Timeframe

We already have resource consent and satisfactory geotech soil test results. We hope to begin installation in the second quarter of 2015.

Turbine

We haven't yet selected the best turbine but in any case it will have a maximum tower height of 10 metres, power rating of 3kW (kilowatts) and swept blade area of 15 square metres.

Your donation

Will help make this project a reality. We are aiming to raise $60,000 - this will buy a robust 3kW turbine, installation, cabling, foundation and connection to the grid. And your donation is tax deductible.

Why bother?

- Wind energy is renewable, clean, has low operating costs, is efficient and is the perfect complement to solar and hydro power.
- Help continue the long tradition of renewable energy generation at Orton Bradley Park.
- The money saved on power over the lifetime of the turbine (25 years) will be used to maintain, upgrade and improve the facilities at Orton Bradley Park.
- Increase the power resilience of the Lyttelton Harbour basin.

For further information please contact Orton Bradley
This project is facilitated by the team at Harbour Wind

Memories of some London Street Shops in the Early 1940's

Ernest Adams Cake Shop.

Whittiam's ices.

A hair cut for 1 / 6. Pence.

Cording's Tea Rooms.

Mahar's men and women's outfitters.

Think of most modern shopping centers of today with their groups of different shops offering a variety of services and goods. London Street Lyttelton was just like that once. Perhaps not quite so many shops, but we never went short of anything.

We are on the south side of London Street, an inviting shop with the smell of food and hot beverages guide our noses to enter Cording's Tea rooms. The brown paneled walls and quaint light shades small tables and chairs, all went together to make an inviting atmosphere for the customer.

If one turned to the left after stepping inside there is a long counter with a glass top and behind that counter stood two smiling ladies. Behind are shelves with large cardboard boxes neatly stacked with stock. This is Ernest Adams Cake Shop.

The window facing London Street is adorned with block cakes and other goodies like cream and pineapple sponges, and many fruit cakes. Our favourite was the Genoa Fruit Cake. This was a favourite with almost everyone.

A Friday shopping treat was to purchase five shillings worth of Genoa Fruit Cake, the ladies with skill could cut a large slice with a hot wet knife, place it on the scales and with a smile say, "that will be five shillings exactly thank you". You paid the five shillings and came out of e.a.s. shop with a very big slice of beaut fruit cake. Yum !

Over on the other side was Whittam's Shop they made their own ices. By law they were not allowed to call them ice creams, but of course they were, and very moorish indeed. You could buy milk shakes, soda drinks freshly made lemonade with the marble at the top to keep it fizzy. And as long it was not Sunday all sorts of confectionary. The law did not permit the sale of lollies or chocolate on Sundays, so on the sabbath the goodies were covered by a curtain.

Further along on the other side was Tommy Thomas the hairdresser, a great place to catch up on all the local news from around the port. A short back and sides skillfully done, and you paid just one and sixpence, complete with a spray of bay rum on the locks.

We head toward towards the corner of London Street and Canterbury Street, to Mahar's outfitters. A family shop large and airy with gas lamps, suspended from the high ceiling, A sampson tube system to carry the customers money and a very professional staff eager to help, be you a lady or gentleman, offering everything from a best suite to an embroidered handkerchief. And always with a kind smile and enquiry about how you were.

People cared, ah! That was really living!

The Soup Kitchen

The Soup Kitchen, a project by community artist Trent Hiles, will be operating in the city next Wednesday 22 April. In the final days before the closing of submissions to Christchurch City Council's Long Term Plan The Soup Kitchen serves to highlight the important part that creative individuals, organisations and its myriad of supporters have played in the revitalisation of the city post-quake, and the essential role that the arts and creative enterprises will have in keeping Ōtautahi-Christchurch a vibrant and exciting place to live, work, and play in over the next ten years and beyond. Much of what has happened creatively has been possible because of the generous and visionary support - both financial and in expertise - from Christchurch City Council.

"The Soup Kitchen celebrates the wide variety of creative responses to our greatly changed city and suburban landscape that have happened over the last four and a half years. I want a street presence, providing people with a vehicle with which to have their voices heard. Whether they are the practitioners themselves, the organisations and businesses that have supported them, the people who have participated in activities and events, spectators - essentially anyone who has benefited from the wealth of community-engaging creative activity that has flourished - all are welcome," says Hiles.

The Soup Kitchen is encouraging people to request that financial support from the Council for all creative activity be maintained. 'Diners' can have their say, either through signing a collective submission document or completing their own, prior to Tuesday 28th April, the last day for submissions.

Hiles is well aware of the Council's need to tighten the purse strings. "This is not a protest at what the Council has indicated it might have to do. This action is a celebration of the array of projects that Council funding has made possible and to remind the Councillors, and the citizens of this city, that for these opportunities to continue to roll out for the next 10 years and beyond, that the funding stream needs to remain at current, if not increased, levels."

Christchurch has made its global mark with a wide variety of post-quake creative activity that has been made possible through the funds provided by Christchurch City Council directly, or in conjunction with the likes of Creative New Zealand.

Hiles concludes: "We are now beyond a post-quake response, we are looking to do more than replace what was here. We have a unique opportunity to recreate what our city looks like and how it works. In many ways, many affordable ways, creatives are driving this reinvention. Diminishing creative output through reduction in funding and the associated administrative support is a step backwards. This city needs every one of the artists, the designers, the performers, the makers and creators who are engaging with the people, with the politics, with the landscape, every one of them needs to stay because the dollars invested result in far greater benefits than just the dollars returned. The creative process and related activity results in healthy, vibrant, engaged communities that experience cultural, social, economic and emotional benefits - it's as simple as that."

Community Emergency Response Team

What's News?

Lyttelton has a core group of locals who meet monthly to assist our community if extra help is needed in an emergency situation. The team is led by Brenda Hurl. Other regular members are John Howie, Helen McCaughan, Rene McPherson, Lesley Milan, Wendy Everingham, Philippa Hay and Daniel Blake. We meet monthly at the Lyttelton Harbour Information Centre.

This year we have been concentrating on getting to know key partners better. Last month we had an informative chat with the new Sergeant Dave Knowles. This past week we met with our new contact from Civil Defence in Christchurch David Collins. In our minds our role is really about knowing people and where to locate resources then being able to link the right people at the right time to help. Our link to the Lyttelton Harbour Timebank and Lyttelton Harbour Information Centre is especially important. Not only do we create a natural hub but this relationship ties us closely to the wider community and as we know can be of great benefit for information provision and sourcing vital skills and equipment when needed.

The new Neighbourhood contact cards that are being disseminated via the Timebank are also enhancing the connection network. The more we know each other the easier it is when we need to reply on each other. Timebank membership continues to grow in Lyttelton, that is very encouraging. Community connectedness is one of the key factors in being able to help each other more effectively when we need to.

Currently our emergency response team uses the Lyttelton Information Centre as its main base and we are supported by the Council Service Centre and Community House. We still don't have access to a large hall. Our main function is looking after your welfare in an emergency situation. This includes providing you with basic provisions, support and information. Best case scenario is you don't need this help because you already have water and food at hand for three days. This is a timely reminder to check your supplies. Can you be self-sufficient for three days?

If you would like to become involved with our team we'd like to hear from you. Please contact Brenda Hurl 021 359 059 or email brendah@fcc.co.nz

Alternatively we meet on the third Wednesday of the month at 7pm at the Lyttelton Information Centre 20 Oxford St Lyttelton. Drop by and introduce yourself.

Boyd Cottages

Just in case you weren't aware Boyd Cottages have re-opened. Councillor Andrew Turner and MP Ruth Dyson officiated at the small ceremony that was attended by members of the Boyd Family. This is wonderful news for Lyttelton providing four much needed council flats for residents.

- Boyd Cottages was built in 1965 and named after Gladys Ethel Boyd (nee Meyrick).
- Mrs Boyd and Mrs J. A. Gilmour were the first women elected as Lyttelton borough Councillors in 1947.
- Mrs Boyd saw the need for pensioner cottages in Lyttelton and these were dedicated to her as a reward for her many years of service to the people of Lyttelton.
- They were re-dedicated by Hon. Ruth Dyson, MP Banks Peninsula, on 15 June 2002.

ANZAC day trading

In the morning of Saturday 25th April, all of Aotearoa remembers those who fell in war, especially the Australians and New Zealanders who fell in the battle of Gallipoli. 2015 is the 100th anniversary of the landing at Gallipoli. There are ANZAC parades in various locations including Lyttelton (starting at 9am). We hope for a world in which war is no longer seen as an option for conflict resolution. I've just had a quick glance at the wikipedia entry on ongoing armed conflicts and death tolls - it is very sobering!

But the good news ...

The Lyttelton Farmers Market will open at 1pm and close at 4pm on ANZAC day.. It is illegal for stalls to trade before 1pm, so please respect that starting time.

Thank you,

Lucette, Kerry and Mia, your Farmers Market team.

It's a Load of Bull.

By Jill Mclelland.

The mystery surrounding the life of Angela Fortisque-Smith deepened as the years passed. A lady of unlimited means, she had arrived in the small seaside town of Deephaven some 20 years previously. She led a very quiet life in her beautiful old cottage with her pets for company. On a nice day she could be seen cantering across the paddocks on her black pony, scarf flying and Ben her Labrador trailing behind them. She belonged to the local Womens' Guild and did the flowers at the church every month but few visitors ever appeared at her door as she preferred her own company. Through her window she could be seen tapping away at her old Remington type-writer – gossip had it that she was writing her memoirs.

Imagine the curiosity when a Police car pulled up outside her cottage and two detectives knocked at her door. The word quickly spread around the town and rumours abounded.

Had some relative died – had she done terrible deeds in the past – had they caught up with her? Perhaps she had murdered all her family and finally the Police had gathered enough information to arrest her. How the locals would have loved to have been “a fly on the wall” within her cottage that afternoon.

After about an hour the two detectives drove off, Angela Fortisque-Smith sitting primly between them. Was she going to jail, maybe “she” was a “he” – living in disguise all these years – after all, she did have a deep voice!

All the minds were boggling.

After a couple of hours the Police car returned and dropped off its passenger. Following close behind was a truck and trailer with something on board – yes – it was a bull. Miss Fortisque-Smith's bull had escaped its paddock and been impounded in the next village. So that was what it had all been about – nothing but a load of bull.
