White Gates Restored

The Lyttelton Menz Shed has just celebrated its first high profile project., Barry Davis and a team of locals have restored the white gates that have been broken at the entrance to Magazine Bay for many years. Efforts to fix the gates previously never eventuated .Christine Wilson from the Community Board suggested that the Menz Shed would be just the team to get this happening. Led by Barry Davis the job has been completed and the team of Dave Templeton, Ralph Stark, Barry Davis, Len Dobier and Julian Cross have very successfully completed the work.

To thank everyone the Lyttelton Mount Herbert Community Board organised a small ceremony celebrating their achievement. The new gates were officially opened on Wednesday July 15th and everyone had the chance to congratulate the team. The Menz Shed team were really proud of their achievement with all of them playing a role in the finished work. It was interesting to learn that the tools they all share came from Julian's garage. He lost his garage after the quake so it's great to know that the tools have found a home at the Menz Shed where the entire team can get pleasure of using them.

Lots Happening...

High above the eastern side of Lyttelton township is Urumau Reserve. An unfamiliar name to many residents, the former Reserve 68 site is humming to the sounds of community activities. Community initiatives include preparation for a new planting season, new tracks for walking and mountain biking plus plans for weed control.

Accessed most easily from the far end of Foster Terrace via a new set of steps and a new path to the bench track, the reserve has become more accessible to the wider public. Local resident Margaret Jefferies commented, "Now I can do a small loop walk very easily." Prior to the path and the steps being installed, access was difficult and a bit of a scramble up a steep bank.

The Reserve is managed by a team of locally-elected community residents. The land belongs to the City Council and it is the role of the Reserve Management Committee to enhance the reserve for public benefit. That means the team aim to ensure the reserve is a place where the community can:

- Enjoy active and passive recreation
- Access neighbouring parks and recreational spaces
- Recognize and share local historical values

- Actively participate in community activities that teach them about the reserve. For example, by helping with native plantings or taking a guided walk to learn more about the unique eco systems.

We are also tasked to protect and enhance native plants and wildlife endemic to the area. If you come on one of our guided walks you'll learn why we don't plant in certain areas and why we only plant eco-sourced plants sourced specifically from local old growth remnant forest. You'll also see the benefit of leaving fallen trees to rot and learn that the best way to re-forest is to just let things develop naturally with a bit of help with pest control.

In the near future there will be many opportunities for you to become involved. A community planting day is scheduled for August 30th. The committee will provide the plants, tools, advice, and a BBQ lunch. If you would like to be involved please email lytteltonreserves@hotmail.co.nz.

In the meantime if you walk up there on a Saturday or Sunday afternoon you will more than likely spot some of the team members preparing for the planting day or building mountain bike tracks. Feel free to ask them questions. Later in the year there will also be some guided walks as part of the Banks Peninsula Walking Festival. That's a great chance to find out in more detail what is happening up there and how you can get involved.

Lyttelton Timeball Station

Visual signals were important features of any port, necessary for communication between ship and shore, in pre-radio times. The Timeball Station sustained devastating damage during the Canterbury earthquakes but the site remains significant to New Zealand's history, and that of international maritime history.

The Timeball's story....

Like a Scottish castle dominating the scenic port of Lyttelton, the Timeball Station was one of the few of its kind left in the world.

From 1876 to 1934 a ball dropped from its mast on its stone tower, signalling the time to ships in Lyttelton Harbour. Visual time signals were important features of many of the world's ports, being necessary to correct ships' chronometers and ensure accurate navigation. The timeball apparatus came from the well-known German firm Siemens Bros, and the astronomical clock from Edward Dent & Co. of London, who had made the Big Ben clock.

Use of the timeball was discontinued in 1934 when it was replaced by radio signals, though flag signals continued until 1941. The flags, which predated the Timeball Station, were used on the flagstaff nearby to signal to ships and to communicate shipping advice to the town.

A fine example of Victorian technology, the Timeball Station was one of only five in the world known to be still in working order. It was a rare piece of maritime history, fabulously restored and boasting spectacular views over Lyttelton Harbour. Sadly, the building was significantly damaged in the Darfield Earthquake on 4 September 2010, and damaged beyond repair in the event of 22 February 2011.

The next chapter

Heritage New Zealand would like to restore parts of this fantastic historic and internationally significant maritime site. Rebuilding the Timeball Station tower will help return an important historic place to the people of Canterbury and to the nation. It will restore heritage to a place that has lost much of its past and be a symbol of hope for the future.

A full rebuild of the Timeball Station simply will not be possible, but with so much of the building's fabric retrieved, recorded and stored, we will be able to rebuild the tower, and let the Timeball rise again. The plan to rebuild the Timeball is ambitious and unique – a heritage building like this has never been rebuilt in New Zealand. This exciting project is complex and will take longer than more typical restoration projects.

Police making a Difference

Anti Social Road Behaviour Improves

Scott Richardson was invited to speak at the Lyttelton Mt Herbert Community Board meeting in July. Scott a member of the Canterbury Road Policing Squad came to update the community about the anti social road user behaviour in the vicinity of Lyttelton and Governors Bay.

This issue was brought to the attention of the police and Community Board after local Governor's Bay resident Rosie organised a community meeting at the Governors Bay Hotel several weeks ago. Word of mouth and social media saw 60 people attend. Speaking to Rosie she confirmed, "The situation had definitely improved since the meeting apart from one incident over the weekend".

Scott summarised the community meeting and said it highlighted three issues, boy racers, overall speed and the safety of cyclists. Police have had some successes since. "There has definitely been a decrease in some offending. We will continue to monitor the situation in the short term and then when some longer term law and engineering solutions are implemented then the operation will reduce"

Police are now working closely with the council to implement some engineering changes to the road environment plus implement prohibitions. Community Board Chair Paula Smith questioned the enforcement of speeding. Scott said "When roading issues are highlighted you get more enforcement, and that's just one of the by products. It's like a health response, you can't just vaccinate a certain proportion of the population it's everyone".

Councillor Andrew Turner asked if the police targeting was wider than Governors Bay and Lyttelton as there was also lots of intimidating and anti social behaviour at Gebbies Pass and the lead up to the tunnel in Lyttelton. We learnt that our entire region is being watched more closely however now that the car problem has been dispersed across the city it's harder to control. "You get the situation where it just moves from spot to spot" said Scott.

In the mean time Community Board representative Denis Aldridge wanted to know what messages could be given to the locals in the short term.

"In the short term things have definitely improved. You can expect to see police day time and Friday and Saturday evenings responding to any jobs and there will be increased enforcement around noise. Scott urged residents to keep calling *555 and every effort will be made to control the situation".

The Villa Gloria

The Villa Gloria has lilac hedge surrounds
A foreign prompted memory in truth abounds
Reminding me on stay out here in distant land
That cherished love from past is still at hand.

High stone wall, inset with grey-blue gates
Echoes stems of lilac — this year flowering late
Encompassing a garden wild but with a friendly air
I sit outside and wish — if only I could linger there.

Amongst the lilac wild and blooming late
And climbing roses just inside the garden gate
To tarry here away from tests of life
And put aside the burden of worries causing strife.

I compose then hear the message as I write
The garden grows right here — in my imagination glowing bright
A place to take some time in every now and then
To restore my soul — when life prods at me again.

Prompted by a beautiful, wild, lilac hedge, which reminded me of the one surrounding the house where I lived as a child.

Community Comes to the Community Board Heaps of Interesting News

The Loons Theatre Trust

The Loons Theatre Trust represented by Daryl Cribb and Kate Anastasiou spoke about the trust getting ready to undertake a large fundraising campaign to raise funding for its new fit out of the new hall theatre space at Lyttelton Primary School. The Ministry of Education and the Trust have entered an agreement to share the hall space. The Trust is required to raise funding for the fit out. They are seeking $127,000 for seating and $260,000 for lighting and sound. The pair detailed plans of a new promotional team at the Trust who are gearing up to make this happen. Daryl said the new space would have seating for 147 people. "It is quite a bit bigger than the former on Canterbury Street that only sat 90 people" he said. He went on to explain that flexibility of the space was the main feature they were aiming for. As before the theatre group like to be able to transform the space for a variety of activities. Retractable seats allows for that flexibility. Kate and Daryl were primarily at the board seeking their advocacy support for the project. The Board were very happy to support the project in principle. Kate and Daryl assured everyone that the Theatre Company was in good health and spirits and were looking forward to their new working relationship with the school and wider community.

Lyttelton Historical Museum Society

The Lyttelton Historical Museum Society gave a summary of their activities. Peter Rough and Therese de Angelo spoke about the progress of the museum's search for new premises. Sites were being narrowed down. To date they are very keen for the new museum to be rebuilt on the site of the former council service centre. This site would enable the museum to have a floor space of 750sq metres. The total size of the building could be up to 924 square metres and be over three levels. Prior to this meeting the museum team signalled their interest in this site to Councillor Turner and they are just sorting how to pursue this outcome within the council. Visiting the Community Board was the first step in the process and everyone around the table was supportive of the idea. The idea will now be progressed within council and if the site is surplus to council requirements more conversations can take place.

The museum team indicated they were no longer interested in a site at Dampier Bay and would prefer a site on London Street. Therese said it was time for a more cohesive approach to heritage in Lyttelton and the greater Christchurch. She recommended that the council undertake a Heritage Strategy. There are many issues that need to be sorted. One related to funding. Paula Smith highlighted that the Akaroa Museum is fully funded by the Council and Lyttelton isn't. There are quite a few anomalies and a Heritage Strategy would make the situation clearer.

On a local note, more of the collection has been rescued. The former milk shed on Norwich Quay has been demolished and the items that were still inside have been carefully removed. "The rescued contents are being checked now" Therese said.

Steam Tug Lyttelton

The heritage theme continued. Steam Tug Lyttelton representatives Rob De Angelo and Geoff Swallow talked about the heritage tug. Did you know it's only one of three left in the country and ours is the oldest of the three? Rob said "The tug, a heritage item is naturally too big to go into a museum but there is no legislation to protect moveable heritage!" With no agency to be the guardians of this type of heritage our local volunteers have picked up reins. It was pleasing to hear that the tug is not too old to continue to sail in the harbour. "The ship will last as long as you want to maintain it", Rob said.

The dilemma for the group is around making enough money to keep things going. They plan to develop a business plan to bring their operations up to the needs of the modern visitor. They are certainly keen for more volunteers and are especially seeking people with marketing, business, design and IT skills.

After the earthquakes the Steam Tug Lyttelton has become one of Lyttelton's most significant heritage items and visitor attractions. This past year 5000 visitors took a trip on the harbour. Contact them via their web site <http://www.tuglyttelton.co.nz/>

Sled Dog Project Finally Moves Forward

While three parts of this project are complete, the Sled Dog Project has been at a stalemate for nearly two years over the location of the bronze dog to be sculpted by Mark Whyte. Many in the community have wanted the sled dog bronze located on the corner of London and Canterbury Streets near the library. Some had other ideas and Council suggested the dog be located in a less prominent location

Dr Margaret Bradshaw, South Island VP of the NZ Antarctic Society described clearly the importance of the town's Antarctic relationships and agreed that the gift of the statue to Council is conditional on the dog being located prominently in the township where people would see it. After much discussion around the table and clarification of council policy the Board voted recommending to the City Council that the gift of the dog and a plaque be accepted at the Board's preferred location on the corner of London and Canterbury Streets. Council agreed that their other concerns, including changes to the Library, would not hamper the Board's recommendation. The Antarctic Society will consult on mana whenua now a site is confirmed and is happy to hold a drop-in session if anyone is interested.

It's Plastic Bag Free July

Waste Matters and the Port Hill Greens are pleased to be hosting a public discussion about how we can work towards the Lyttelton Harbour being plastic bag free. Denise Roche, Green Party MP, is touring the country to promote her campaign that is raising awareness of the wastefulness of single use items such as plastic supermarket bags, disposable coffee cups, plastic straws and so on. She will speak at the meeting and tell us about other initiatives around the country.

When: Monday July 20, 7-9 pm

Where: Stage Room: Diamond Harbour Hall

Skip dessert that night - cake and hot drinks provided from 7pm, and the workshop starts at 7:15 pm.

The first workshop will focus on exploring and finding answers to these Two Big Questions:

- What changes will a changing climate have most likely made to our Lyttelton Harbour environment in 10-20 years time?; &
- What can be done to best mitigate or adapt to the coming changes at the local level?

For more information/to confirm your attendance please email Christine - christine@horomaka.org.

Diamond Harbour and Districts Historical Assn Inc.

The next meeting of the Historical Assn will be held at 7.30 pm on Tuesday, 11 August, 2015 in the Stage Room, Diamond Harbour Community Hall. Please note the earlier starting time of 7.30 pm.

Our speaker will be Mike Crean whose talk is entitled "The Happy Wanderer – travels and roaming thoughts on South Island history and the state of our newspapers".

Mike's talk will inter-weave some experiences from his 28 years in journalism in Christchurch, including 10 years doing the Heartland column for The Press, with observations on small-town issues around the South Island and the changing demands and conditions of newspaper work in this age of media revolution.

The attendance at our June meeting was well down so I do hope that you will all make the effort to attend this meeting, especially as our speaker is driving over the icy roads from Christchurch just to speak to us.

I am sure you will all enjoy Mike's talk so do encourage your friends or neighbours who enjoy local history to join us.

Coastal Hazard Report Released

Christchurch City Council has released a report identifying areas at risk from coastal inundation and coastal erosion.

The Coastal Hazard Assessment Report was presented at this morning's District Plan Review Subcommittee, as part of the proposed Stage Three Natural Hazards chapter.

The report, by environmental engineers Tonkin & Taylor Ltd, reviews the existing coastal hazard zones for southern Pegasus Bay and identifies coastal settlement areas susceptible to inundation and erosion around Lyttelton and Akaroa harbours, over a 50 and 100 year timeframe.

These assessments are in line with the New Zealand Coastal Policy Statement which requires local authorities throughout New Zealand to identify areas potentially affected by coastal hazards over at least 100 years. This work needs to take into account the likely effect of climate change.

"This report provides us with essential information to consider in our current planning, so the timing is crucial as we continue our District Plan Review process, which includes a specific focus on coastal hazards," says Mayor Dalziel.

"Coastal communities all around the world are facing the challenges of climate change and sea-level rise. Here in Christchurch, there is often confusion about our coastline, because it is currently accreting, with periods of erosion from storm events. However, the long-term trend is of a shoreline moving further inland, and this is the trend we need to plan for.

Map for the areas of coast that have been identified in our area.

Unit Manager Natural Environment and Heritage Helen Beaumont says the report is the latest in a series commissioned by the Council over a period of years to gain a comprehensive understanding of sea-level rise and its potential effects.

"The report released today includes the latest predictions on sea-level rise, and how this could impact our coastal areas in coming years.

"We appreciate this is difficult information for residents and communities, but you only have to look at recent storm events around the world, and here in New Zealand, to realise these are issues that can't be ignored."

The coastal hazard assessments in the report will be used to support Stage Three of the proposed Christchurch Replacement District Plan, which will be notified on July 25. The community will then have an opportunity to make submissions on the proposals.

the Garage Sale

RETRO THEME

The garage sale is again on show
With familiar things that we all know,
It's fun and exciting, so get up and go -
Get into the flow: it's RETRO!

Round up encumbrances you want to ditch
And bring to the sale all your kitch.
Have a change and do a switch.
Transform your house into The Ritz.

Bring along mid-century gear,
That has effervescence and the flair
Of generations past and yesteryear,
To the sale next to Albion Square.

Bring candelabras and antique brass,
And translucent hand-blown glass;
Wood that is carved and hewn to last
Into fabulous furniture of class.

When you arrive at the garage sale store,
You will find ornaments galore.
China, jewellery and pottery and more,
And vases which defy gravitational law.
Curtains and rugs with flowers and swirls
From the heady days of cashmere and pearls.
Tasselled lamps curved and curled
Lacy nets of voile unfurled.

Quality clothes New Zealand made,
With sumptuous weaves and gorgeous plaid
Of viyella, taffeta, vinyl and suede,
When commercial sewing was a trade.

Sofas in floral Sanderson
Remind us of the childhood fun
Of sneaking a look and then to run,
As fussy Nanna was soon to come.

Through the glass of the padlocked door
We peered with wonder and endless awe.
The forbidden parlour was only for
Nanna's treasures to parade and store.

Oh we wanted to jump on that sofa,
And turn all the ornaments over,
Touch silver and English tea-sets from Dover
And green Irish porcelain with clover.

But Nanna's kitchen fire was warm
When we stayed at the family farm.
It smelt of cakes and starch and iron,
Fresh milk and cream from the barn.

Now at last it is your precious chance
To own these treasures, not just glance
At Nanna's teasures, made in France,
Of such good taste and of such stance.

Get potpourri, platters and old coffee perks
Fondues, fancy bedspreads and frilly skirts.
From secret corners where a bargain lurks
Shop, laugh and cry until it hurts.

Toys of tin and wood made to last,
To aquire them you'd better be fast.
Come on in and give it a blast.
RETRO is not a thing of the past.

Double Exposure

Dorothy Shrimpton's latest exhibition.

Dorothy Shrimpton was born in Northern Island and studied fine arts at Reading University. She taught art and art history for many years before finding the delights of harbour living seven years ago.

She enjoys painting a range of subjects however the underlying attraction of certain shapes and forms remain fairly constant. Most of her work is in oil, some in mixed media. She likes to layer her work and she finds that traditional way of painting enables her to do that. "When I left teaching I resumed painting and have exhibited and sold work in a number of countries" she said.

"I firmly believe that art is part of a journey, totally self indulgent, liberating, frustrating and satisfying at various levels. I hope you like this small selection and travel into a visual journey of your own"

Double Exposure is her current exhibition at the Lyttel Gallery 20 Oxford St Lyttelton.

Open Monday to Saturday 10-4pm and Sunday 11-3pm.

TANE TU TANE ORA COURSE - 2015

Whakaraupo Carving will be introducing a new Tane Tu Tane Ora course in 2015, commencing in July for 3 full days per week (days yet to be determined). Tane Tu Tane Ora course is aimed at assisting men and women who want to connect with their heritage, to show and teach a new way of thinking and believing in themselves.

The participants will gain:

- Skills in carving.
- Skill in using tools, machinery and other equipment safely and correctly in a tightly controlled workshop.
- A greater understanding of their individual whakapapa.
- Knowledge of the local area and its history.
- Good habits regarding timekeeping and commitment.
- The ability to participate effectively in a team environment and be accountable to others.
- The experience of achieving an objective.

All participants will need to have transport to and from Lyttelton daily.

Participants will work towards murals with a group which can then be presented to organisations which have assisted them in their goals.

Participants will be given lunch daily, and all material and carving costs have been covered by the generous assistance of the Red Cross Foundation.
