Orlando and Pearl

PART 3

Orlando sat on the window sill peering out of the rain streaked window, her tail twitching in irritation, 'where was that woman,' she thought. Humans were so undependable, what could possibly be keeping her.

She jumped down to the floor and arched her back, her muscles rippling under her hair; then, with sudden explosive energy she clawed the arm of the couch, then, darting under it she clawed her way along the length of its underside on her back. She was so annoyed.

Pearl heard the tearing noise, and opened the door with a billow of steam and dripping hooves, she was going to scold her friend, but at that moment Orlando's head appeared from under the couch, and Pearl saw her big black eyes staring wildly at her. The crazed cat grabbed a mouthful of chintz upholstery and gave it what for with her hind legs kicking, their strong claws tearing it to shreds. Pearl made a hasty retreat, when Orlando was in one of 'those' moods it was best to leave her be until she had gotten it out of her system. Pearl knew this from bitter experience and still bore a scar on her nose in testament to that knowledge, the door swung shut and Pearl returned to rinsing the quiet sailors' shirts.

By the time Maureen walked up the path and knocked on the cottage door, Orlando was composedly grooming her coat, spreading her special saliva and burnishing her beautiful brindle hair to a brilliant shine.

"Enter," called Orlando, stretching languorously, and when Maureen came in she was lying on her back with her paws charmingly folded over her white chest. Maureen smiled at the beautiful cat,

"I'm sorry I'm late Orlando,"

Orlando flipped over easily and purring she wrapped herself around Maureen's ankles, "it's alright," she purred, "you're here now, you need to stoke the fire in the kitchen, we're having to dry everything inside today, and the cat led the way into Pearls' steamy domain,

Myrtle rust threat prompts call for vigilance

Christchurch and Banks Peninsula residents are being urged to keep their eyes open for any sign of the myrtle rust plant disease recently discovered in New Zealand.

Myrtle rust is an invasive fungus that attacks members of the myrtle family of plants. It could seriously damage or kill mānuka, rātā, kānuka and pōhutukawa, as well as feijoa and eucalyptus.

Bright yellow powdery eruptions are one of the signs of myrtle rust.

While myrtle rust is found all along Australia's eastern seaboard, it has only just been detected in New Zealand.

As of Monday the number of properties infected with myrtle rust nationally stood at 25 – 20 properties in Taranaki, three in Northland and two in Waikato.

"Myrtle rust spores are microscopic and can easily spread across large distances by wind so unfortunately it is likely at some point that myrtle rust will reach Christchurch and Banks Peninsula," said Christchurch City Council Head of Parks Andrew Rutledge.

"The Ministry for Primary Industries (external link) is doing all it can to stop the spread of the disease and has stepped up its surveillance but we all need to be on the look-out for this disease because if we can detect it early, we will have the best chance of containing its spread," Mr Rutledge said.

How to identify myrtle rust

Myrtle rust only affects plants in the myrtle family. It generally attacks soft, new growth, including leaf surfaces, shoots, buds, flowers, and fruit. Symptoms to look out for on myrtle plants are:

- Bright yellow powdery eruptions appearing on the underside of the leaf (young infection)
- Bright yellow powdery eruptions on both sides of the leaf (mature infection)
- Brown/grey rust pustules (older spores) on older lesions.

Some leaves may become buckled or twisted and die off.

What you can do

If you think you've seen the symptoms of myrtle rust, do not touch it.

- Call the MPI Exotic Pest and Disease Hotline immediately on 0800 80 99 66.
- If you have a camera or phone camera, take clear photos, including the whole plant, the whole affected leaf, and a close-up of the spores/affected area of the plant.
- Don't touch it or try to collect samples as this may increase the spread of the disease.

Artist impressions of Lyttelton's new Te Ana Marina released to public

Lyttelton Port of Christchurch (LPC) has today released the first artist impressions of what its new Te Ana Marina will look like.

LPC Chief Executive Peter Davie says the images serve to highlight the positive impact that this long-awaited development will bring to the region.

"More than 20 years after the first plans to develop a marina at Lyttelton were unveiled, we hope that today's new artist impressions will help bring the Te Ana project to life – providing the public with a glimpse of what the area might look like when complete," says Davie.

"Christchurch will finally have what all other major New Zealand cities have and that is a fully serviced, walk-on marina."

Te Ana Marina will be built at the site of the inner harbour pile moorings in Lyttelton Harbour, and is the first stage of LPC's wider regeneration plan to improve public access and amenities in the area.

It will be Canterbury's only walk-on floating marina, featuring up to 170 berths for yachts and powerboats and a waterfront promenade linking the marina to Lyttelton's town centre. Construction is expected to start this month (June) and continue throughout 2017 and early 2018.

Last month LPC commissioned independent valuation company Telfer Young to review Lyttelton's residential property market, and estimate the impact Te Ana Marina could have on property values in the development's vicinity. The report concluded that, "the positive attributes of the development will flow through to the desirability of properties overlooking the development, and to a lesser degree to those within walking distance."

Commenting on the findings, local resident and real estate agent Vicki Tahau Paton says Te Ana will positively contribute to Lyttelton's growing identity as a thriving port town.

"A development like Te Ana Marina can only be a good thing for Lyttelton and the wider region, giving the township a further sense of pride," says Vicki, who has lived in Lyttelton for the past 15 years. Her husband, Robert Paton, was born there.

"We have already seen a steady increase in property values as Lyttelton continues its rebuild efforts, and Te Ana will only add to this momentum. From a resident's perspective, the main drawcard for me is the fact that the area will be useable and functional for everybody – not just the Port. Being able to touch the water again will be a novelty in itself."

Fellow Lyttelton resident Robyn Robinson agrees, claiming Te Ana is going to be a "fantastic area" for locals and visitors alike.

Robyn's property is situated on Godley Quay, which overlooks the Te Ana development. LPC has installed a camera to the outside of her house so that live images are available to the public 24/7 as the marina progresses. The images are live on the LPC website <http://www.lpc.co.nz/lpc/harbour-webcam/te-ana-marina/>

"I am really excited about the Te Ana Marina and what it means for the local community," says Robyn. "The new waterfront promenade will be a great asset providing an essential link between the town centre and the marina. It makes my heart sing to think about what this area will soon look like and represent, particularly as it has been underdeveloped for so long."

There has been strong demand from boaties looking to secure a berth at the new marina, with more than 170 people registering their interest. There are still limited spaces available, and people are encouraged to contact LPC if they wish to put their name down for licensing a berth.

LPC will continue to liaise with the local community in the lead-up to and throughout construction. Last week two community drop-in meetings were held in Lyttelton to update the public and provide relevant timeframes.

"We recognise that the Te Ana development is important to a number of individuals, groups and organisations," says Davie.

"LPC has therefore embarked on a programme of regularly communicating and informing the public as the project advances. This includes providing updates on vehicle access and ensuring the strict enforcement of environmental noise control measures."

Vehicle access to Te Ana Marina will be via Godley Quay. LPC is working closely with the Christchurch City Council to look at how roading in the area can be improved, particularly with the expected increase in vehicles. This included making a submission to the Council's 2017/18 Annual Plan, to address intersection and road safety issues at both Simeon and Godley Quays.

Other Information

The central theme of the Lyttelton Port Recovery Plan (LPRP), which had Ministerial approval, is to shift port operations east, which will free up space on the western side of the inner harbour to build a marina and allow for development of Te Ana.

Community consultation undertaken as part of the Lyttelton Port Recovery Plan revealed a strong message from local residents that they supported future development of the Inner Harbour and wanted safe and increased access to the waterfront.

Commercial rates will apply in the new marina, with licence fees being similar to other New Zealand marinas of this size. The berths will be owned and managed by LPC.

The Te Ana redevelopment encompasses the LPC land below Simeon and Godley Quays between No. 7 Wharf and Lyttelton Engineering.

Community Spirit Shining

Some Things Don't Change in Lyttelton

This is the story of a newish Lyttelton resident quietly supporting a lifelong Lyttelton resident during her earthquake recovery journey. First the wider community knew of this partnership was a social media post from Lynnette Baird asking for people to support Maureen Wilson to create a new garden for her brand new Lyttelton home. The social media site was overflowing with offers of help. A landscape architect, garden suppliers, volunteers for planting, volunteers for making food, volunteers donating plants. People from all, over the township responded. Over 100 in total responded to the call for help and advice.

Maureen is a well-known face for many of us in Port. Whether it's the Garage Sale, Farmers Market, Top Club, Shroom Room, she's always out and about with her friends Maureen and Rita. These three really know how to enjoy life and their vitality and enthusiasm is noticed by many. They are Lyttelton treasures and for Maureen this was reflected in the great response to Lynnette's request.

Maureen Wilson nee(Tozer), was born in Canterbury Street over eighty years ago. "My Dad told me that back then there were no phones. He announced my birth to my grandmother in Jackson's Road by a very loud whistle"! Maureen is the youngest of four. She recalls a really happy life growing up in Lyttelton. "Like many families we moved house. By the time I was at school our house was in Winchester Street. It was great, school was just across the road and the playground was nearby as well" she said.

She has very happy memories of those times. She married and had 5 children. She really enjoyed the beach and spent many happy times at Corsair Bay. "We owned an Austin 10 at one stage and I clearly remember myself and my friend piling into the car with 7 children, no seat belts in those days and just having a wonderful time".

Fast forward to 2017, life is still very good for Maureen in Lyttelton. She loves the community spirit of the past and the community spirit of the present. She is blown away by the support she has received from the wider community and Lynnette Baird. "Initially the two of us were dealing with the same issues. We both had old houses that were ruined in the earthquakes. If it wasn't for Lynnette I don't know where I would be", she said. "I really don't know how to thank her. She even took me on trips looking for my new kitchen, bathroom and household fittings".

To top that all off unbeknown to Maureen, Lynnette organised the social media post requesting helpers for Maureen's garden makeover, many locals responded. Work began at 10am on the last Sunday in May. By 12pm it was all done and some of the volunteers were turned away! To top it off the helpers even brought the food and her great granddaughter made a cake to celebrate the occasion.

A few other helpers require special mention. Cheryl Lucas and Peter Rough for organising the planting plan, purchasing extra plants needed and for co-ordinating everyone on the day. "They were just fabulous and the day wouldn't have gone so smoothly without them" said Lynnette. A large donation of plants came from Richard Quedley (Cass Bay local). Food was supplied by Sue Instone (Volcano) delicious watercress and artichoke soup that was very much appreciated; Cindy Claire Warner for the ANZAC biscuits; and Dawn Cowan for the savoury scones (that arrived a little late so ended up at the Top Club, but very much enjoyed).

Maureen is truly of the belief that if you make an effort to say hello and smile to people they will respond back well. She recalls a card that she was given years ago. "A smile can't be bought or sold but it's one of the nicest gifts that you can give". With that in mind that's how she's responded to Lyttelton residents over the years.

Engineers go farming

Creating wiggly contribution for community garden

The wiggly worms at the Lyttelton community gardens have a new home to dig down in. With the help from Fulton Hogan workers five new worm farms have been made.

The Fulton Hogan crew is no stranger to the St Davids Street area, for five years their workers have been active rebuilding the many damaged retaining walls in Lyttelton and their work on five of the walls on St Davids Street took almost a year, from July 2015 to July 2016, to complete.

Bryan Ansett, project engineer at Civil South Fulton Hogan, says it makes sense to help out the local community: "It feels good to do your bit to help your local community. Crew from our civil engineering department and the Canterbury maintenance guys have worked together to donate their labour and some machinery to create the new worm farm frames."

Scott Davison, projects operations manager Fulton Hogan: "It was great fun to work together to create something out of used materials as well, the old bath tubs came in handy. And we had major fun creating it all."

The community gardens are well loved by the locals and the new worm farms are already in high demand. Lucette Hindin, co-manager of Project Lyttelton, is very pleased with the new worm farms. "Our volunteers are at the heart of the project and it was such a nice thing that when we asked for some assistance with raising the flower beds and building a larger suite of worm farms that Fulton Hogan put their hand up. Really nice work and great to see that the guys got their hands dirty for a good food cause."

Scott Davison, a local in Lyttelton himself really liked the opportunity to volunteer for Project Lyttelton. "A worm farm is a fantastic way to minimise food waste: worms eat organic waste and turn it into liquid fertiliser. At the Lyttelton Community Garden people can learn how to grow food and at the same time minimise waste. The frames we have made will play a central role in minimising waste and food production at the garden."

Lyttelton-Wellington Ferries

A Brief History Part 1

Did you know the final ferry sailing from Lyttelton to Wellington was on 15th September 1976? The Lyttelton-Wellington Ferry Service commenced in 1895!

Prior to 1895 ships sailed between Lyttelton and Wellington and during the course of their longer voyages until the ferry service began people simply took the next ship passing through port. By the 1890s though, Wellington was growing rapidly as the colony's political and economic centre. It was time for a dedicated service.

The Union Steam Ship Company began cautiously, in April 1895. It advertised that its 31 year old steamship "Penguin" would run once a week between Wellington and Lyttelton. Demand grew quickly and sailings increased to two and then to three a week. Other Union Steam Ship Company ships redeployed to the service included the former trans-Tasman liners "Rotomahana" and "Mararoa", which were running mates by the time nightly sailings were introduced in 1905.

In 1906 the Company ordered its first purpose-built Lyttelton Ferry, the "Maori", from its favourite builder, Wm Denny Bros of Dumbarton, Scotland. Just before he died, Premier Richard Seddon had been pressuring the Company about offering cheap fares for his pride and joy, the planned Christchurch International Exhibition so the "Maori" was meant to impress.

The Maori was big – 3399 tons gross and 107 metres long – but its engines were steam turbines instead of the traditional triple expansion steam plant,

Penguin

The Penguin was built by Todd & McGregor of Glasgow, Scotland, for G & J Burns of Glasgow and launched on 21 January 1864. She was finally sold to the Union Steamship Company in 1879, and was extensively refitted in 1882. As built she was 749 GRT and 874 GRT from 1882.

Penguin

After running on the Wellington to Lyttelton service she was transferred to the Wellington Picton service. She departed Picton on 12 February 1909 en route to Wellington in good conditions. However, by 8pm the weather conditions had changed, with very strong winds and bad visibility. At 10pm Captain Francis Naylor headed further out to sea to wait for a break in the weather. Unfortunately, as she turned, she smashed into Thorns Rock and water started to pour in. As the cold water reached the red-hot boilers a massive steam explosion violently fractured the ship. As a result of the sinking 75 people lost their lives leaving only 30 survivors. This was New Zealand's worst maritime disaster of the 20th century,

Mararoa

The Mararoa, 2598 tons, was built by Dennys of Dumbarton in 1885. She was joined by the Rotomahana in 1905 to provide a daily service from Wellington to Lyttelton. After serving on the inter-island ferry service she was transferred to other work being laid up in 1931. She was stripped and her hull was scuttled.

Rotomahana

Rotomahana

Known as the greyhound of the Pacific, the clipper-bowed figurehead-adorned Rotomahana, 1,727 tons was built in 1879 for the New Zealand – Australia service. The Rotomahana established a great reputation as the finest and fastest ship of her size, and for many years was the most popular vessel in the service. From 1897 she worked the inter-island run between Wellington and Lyttelton until 1908 when she was transferred to the service between Melbourne and Launceston. She was laid up in 1920 and her hull later scuttled. ....to be continued

Comfortably Numb Policy

Comfortably numb, reminds me of a song from Pink Floyd, which I first remember hearing when I was very young and ahem, far out! Yes! I was comfortably numbed. Presently, I dare say, numbed fits in with the challenging way many today live their lives. Where and when does the relationship of numbness, blindness, and being desensitized begin. Who cares? Well you should, for the simple reason that this convenience of being numb, is shaping the world all of us live in. 'The Paris Climate Agreement,' 'President Trump,' and that awful word, shall I say it, 'Terrorism,' affects all of us to some degree. Yet, most of us down here in the south pacific won't give a dam, simply because we are so far away. By now you may be thinking, what's he driving at? As you will have heard through other media, the National Elections are looming. From your account, who you want to govern as leaders in Aotearoa, New Zealand? What do you want for our precious piece of heaven among others, 'sic' to remain so, because by birth-right, or choice, it is our right to live here in peace and happiness, with good policies in Government, that protect those principles and values and ethics, good lord, yes!

Most society prefer to allow our government rulers to call the shots and therefore many changes, both good and bad continuing to shape the culture/s and environment we live in. Moving on.

Is it easier to blame someone else, like the teacher, or, the government? Are our local, regional and government leaders numbed to the behaviour of repetitive cycles of bad behaviour? What, I ask myself could be the driving factor that upsets early childhood values and road-maps that makes them destructive, desensitized, comfortably numb. There is no licencing for being a parent, perhaps there should be. Is it that the more indulgent our world becomes with an easy fix, the harder it is for good management in values & ethics to be maintained.

Here is something to think about. The decree given by our former governments, that life will be better for all in all ways regarding housing, affordability, technology and lifestyle is a lie. Only the very few do very well and live so very well off. The rest of us are slaves to mortgages and stuff we are urged to have and don't need, the indulgencies. I'm not saying we shouldn't have any. However! Do we need better community management from our leaders? Winston Peters recently made the statement that responsibility comes down to our parents. I agree with him on that point. Winston does give bigger clarification about parenting & that is wonderful & is he also right that not enough is being done about it? How is our education policy shaping up with the rest of the world? Are we leaders? What do we need to have in place for our future in New Zealand, that can project to the world more besides rugby, number eight wire thinking and Hamilton Jet? To be blunter, with our youth suicide rate for such a small population, and the huge increase in crime with drugs, dairy robberies and burglary, lack of policing, cuts to health care and funding of important benefits, all the former, our clever leaders play down, or shift the blame. How comfortably numb are we? Best of luck with your voting this year.

Sunday 2 July 1 – 4 pm in Lyttelton.

The venue will be decided when we see how many people want to come. If you are interested in attending send an email to margaret.jefferies@clear.net.nz

Savings Pools are groups of friends (sometimes not known when you first join) who collectively save (each has their own account) and take turns to use the money interest free. Reciprocity comes in the form of your savings (same amount as you borrow) which when complete is returned to you.

The session is open for people who are intrigued by the concept of savings pools – who may have heard of them from friends but don't know how they work. Maybe feeling that such a system is too good to be true!

The game includes role cards and situation cards. It is an excellent way to understand how the savings pool system works and helps you decide whether you want to be part of one at some stage.

Lyttelton Museum

Christchurch City Council is seeking feedback on a proposal to gift the property at 33-35 London Street, Lyttelton, to the Lyttelton Historical Museum Society for their new museum.

33-35 London Street, Lyttelton was acquired by the Council in 2008 as a local service centre. The land has been vacant since 2011, when the buildings were substantially damaged in the earthquakes and were subsequently demolished. Council has no current plans for rebuilding on this site.

The Society needs another site for their museum after their most recently-leased premises at 1 Gladstone Quay was made uninhabitable following the Canterbury earthquakes.

Submissions are open between Wednesday 7 June 2017 and Friday 30 June 2017 and the Council will make a decision end July/early August 2017.

You can find out more details about the proposal, and how to have your say, at: www.ccc.govt.nz/haveyoursay

Social Enterprise World Forum

Plans are well underway for the Social Enterprise World Forum (SEWF) to be held in Christchurch September 27 – 29 this year.

The Akina Foundation is hosting the event. Numbers attending will be in the 1000s.

Different groups define what a social enterprise is, but the below diagramme is a good illustration of what the term covers.

Actually the term 'social enterprise' is a current buzz word for something that has been around for a long time (co-ops and the like).

Government bodies seem keen for third sector groups to initiate social enterprises for their particular organisations as a way towards becoming economically viable. Project Lyttelton is engaged in several social enterprises – the Garage Sale is one that brings income to many parts of the community.

I do have a cynical take though at being encouraged by government bodies to set up social enterprises as it makes it easier for them to opt out of providing resources for an already stretched sector, a sector that is intent on building community. Responsibility is being outsourced.

However, with a more positive view...

SEWF is generating energy in the sector. Christchurch is a leading centre in New Zealand for social enterprises and although Akina, Lindsay Jeffs, The Ministry of Awesome and other groups are encouraging the development of social enterprises, still the sector doesn't 'know' itself.

We don't know what all the different social enterprises are in the region. How these might support one another.

CCC is moving into the area with its support of SEWF. It is also a sponsor for Lindsay Jeffs' courses, and it is working on its purchasing policies to make it a more even playing field for local social enterprises.

What are the social enterprises associated with the Harbour Basin?

As Chair of Project Lyttelton I am familiar with PL's social enterprises – the Garage Sale as mentioned, the Farmers Market and the new development that is unfolding, Gather, the result of three third sector organisations coming together to create a café within the Food Resilience Network's development of Otakaro Orchard and garden which is located adjoining the PGG memorial site in the central city. (Gather is honoured to have Giulio project managing the enterprise until it is up and running in the first part of 2018).

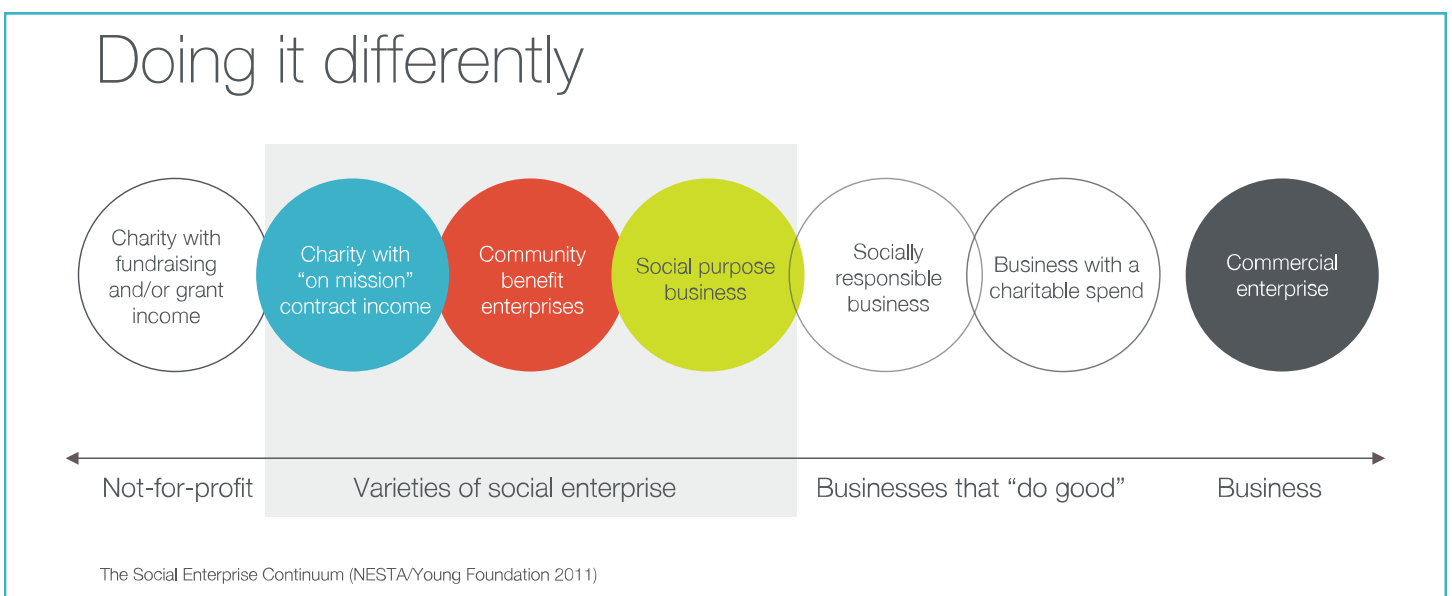

Then there is Laura's Dairy based at Charteris Bay selling raw milk at the farm gate.

What are some others?

There is a great variety of forms that these social enterprises can take, they can be the usual business model, or maybe a B Corporation like Ethique (soaps/shampoos in cakes so we don't have plastic) or Co-ops, or community supported agriculture or...

Whatever the particular form, social enterprises are growing the ideal of business having ethics, having care for the earth, realising that the Milton Friedman mantra of business's only duty was to maximise profits for their stakeholders is now obsolete if we want to live well and not in a 'death economy'.

Light – Creativity – Celebration 2017

A series of light installations are planned around the Lyttelton township again this year. The project was a huge success last year, creating little pockets of magic around the township.

For the first time you will be able to download the free izi.TRAVEL app on your smartphone or device allowing people to take a guided tour visiting each site, we will be able read and listen to information provided by the artists on our devices. Julia Holden's Lyttelton Redux exhibition is also still available on this app.

This year will see 11 or more installations including a projection by Hannah Beehre onto the tunnel portal Heathcote side. Some will be up (those in shop windows) for the whole week of 17 – 23 June and others will be up for one night only for the Street Party on Friday 23 June. We are in for quite a treat this year.

LIGHT UP YOUR HOUSES LYTTTELTON!

Environment Canterbury has received an application from Lyttelton Port Company (LPC) for resource consents in respect of its proposed Te Awaparahi Bay Reclamation Project (Project).

The Project involves the proposed construction of a reclamation and a piled wharf totalling approximately 24 hectares in size. The Project is to be undertaken in Te Awaparahi Bay, Lyttelton Harbour/Whakaraupō.

LPC proposes to undertake the Project in two stages:

- Stage 1 will involve the construction of approximately 5 hectares of reclamation via end tipping; and
- Stage 2 will involve the construction of approximately 16 hectares of reclamation, by:
  - creating a perimeter bund around the remaining area to be reclaimed; and
  - the bulk filling of the area behind the bund.

A piled wharf will be constructed in stages along the southern edge of the proposed reclamation footprint.

Part of Cashin Quay breakwater will also be removed, during either Stage 1 or Stage 2 of the reclamation construction.

The applicant has applied for the following resource consents in relation to the proposed Project:

1. CRC175507 – Coastal permit to reclaim seabed and construct a wharf, and associated disturbance of the seabed, and deposition onto or into the seabed in the Coastal Marine Area.

3. CRC175508 – Coastal permit to discharge any water or any contaminants into water or into or onto land, and associated deposition in the Coastal Marine Area.
4. CRC175509 – Coastal permit to discharge stormwater (water and contaminants) into water, or onto or into land, and associated deposition in the Coastal Marine Area.
5. CRC175510 – Discharge permit and a coastal permit to discharge dust into air from the site.

Companion to Ōtamahua-Quail Island a link with the past

Additional notes on the human history of the island

Source: Anglican Diocese Archives

Source: Christchurch City Libraries

Source: LJ Daniel

Archives New Zealand

Researched and written for the Ōtamahua/Quail Island Ecological Restoration Trust.

All proceeds from the sales of the eBook will go to the Trust and be used to continue the ecological restoration of the island.

If you would like to join the trust go to www.quailislandtrust.org.nz

The Companion

It is now 111 years since the first patient with leprosy was sequestered in the old quarantine hospital on Ōtamahua/Quail Island. It is 92 years since the leper colony on the island was closed and its patients transferred to Makogai Island leper colony in the Fiji Islands, and 86 years since the buildings associated with the leper colony were either sold, removed or burnt down. Only a few physical traces of this piece of Aotearoa/New Zealand history remain.

This eBook has been written to be read in conjunction with Peter Jackson's book "Ōtamahua/Quail Island, - a link with the past" published in a revised edition in 2006.

Although the eBook is focused on the leper colony, the patients and those who provided medical, pastoral and support for them, it also reveals new information about other aspects of the human history of the island, including information on mining, the rumour of gold, the first deer imported into Aotearoa/New Zealand, fatalities, the Navy League Cadet Training Base, earthquake damage, the railway on the wharf, military history, David Halliwell's lease and more.

The island's complex human history, especially the leper colony and the Antarctic expeditions give the island international significance.
