In return you will receive full training, be in a supportive and caring environment and make lifelong friends. Plus, there will be cake!

Wishing you all well, Rushani Bowman.

Micro-chipping easy way to keep track of your dog.

The Christchurch City Council Animal Shelter is reminding dog owners to take advantage of its free microchipping service offered every Wednesday from 11am to midday.

Manager Animal Services Lionel Bridger says with the dog registration period currently open it's a timely opportunity for dog owners to check and make sure their four-legged friend has been microchipped.

It's been a legal requirement for dogs in Christchurch since 2016.

Mr Bridger says if a dog becomes lost, they are far more likely to be reunited with their owner if they're microchipped.

"Over the past year Animal Services found 2703 dogs but due to microchipping the vast majority were returned home safely to their owners.

"This not only means the owner avoids a fee, but it's also better for the dogs because they avoid the stress of placed in an unfamiliar environment at the shelter and being separated from their owners," says Mr Bridger.

A microchip is a permanent method of electronic identification which involves implanting a small chip, about the size of a grain of rice, under the skin on the back of a dog's neck.

The microchip number is recorded on a national register with details about the dog and owner. If the dog wanders or becomes lost it means vets or Animal Control Officers can scan the animal for a microchip and contact the owner.

To take advantage of the free microchipping service visit the Christchurch City Animal Shelter at 10 Metro Place, Bromley on Wednesday's from 11am-12noon.

Three one-off microchipping sessions are also being held on Wednesday 1 September at the following times:

9am at the Lyttelton Recreation Grounds, 3 Godley Quay

11am outside Governors Bay School

1pm by the Diamond Harbour sports fields on Waipapa Ave

Have you registered your dog?

The due date for your standard dog registration payment is 31 July.

Dog registration fees help pay for dog bite prevention education services, dog parks, free dog microchipping and other animal management services throughout the city.

Historic Lyttelton Boat House Saved

New Home in Governors Bay

It wasn't that long ago that the word was out that the old Canterbury Yacht and Motorboat building was being re-located from Dampier Bay to make way for the new Te Ana Marina and a new owner was wanted to preserve the historic building. Facebook posts bounced around and ideas were shared and then the chatter went quiet. Was the building going to survive or be scrapped?

Louisa Eades, the Secretary of the Governors Bay Jetty Restoration Trust, saw the Facebook post and with other community members came up with a great plan to save the Boat House. The almost 100-year-old building is going to be restored and saved. "I immediately thought of the old piles down near the Governors Bay Jetty where Lionel Jefcoate's boat shed once stood and could see the possibilities", she said.

"The Boat House will be re-purposed as a community facility and is an essential element of the Governors Bay Jetty rebuild project. We'll have a lean-to for storage of kayaks, including those owned by the jetty Trust for schools and youth organisations to use for water safety and outdoor education.

"The building itself will be an information centre, indoor area for events on the jetty, and we'd like to have an artist studio with a rotation of artists-in-residence to display and sell their work." she said.

If all goes to plan the relocated Boat House will be opened in 2023 in time to celebrate the buildings 100th birthday.

Quite a lot has happened since Louisa's spark of an idea. The nuts and bolts to make this idea a reality have kicked in. "We have set up the Bays Boat House Group as sub-committee under Governors Bay Jetty Restoration Trust. This group is dedicated to fundraising and managing the Boat House project."

To help turn the Boat House vision into reality, Louisa is joined by Governors Bay locals, Blue Henderson, Prue Miller, and Simon Mortlock, as well as the Batchelors from Christchurch and well-known James Ensor who has been part of the Boat Safety Team at Naval Point for many years. The team are so happy about this project as it's their chance to save one of the few historic boat buildings in the area.

Phase 1 of the project is already complete – temporary storage has been provided by Lyttelton Port Company, and a concept design and engineer's costing has been completed.

Louisa says that there has been overwhelming support for the project, including many offers of practical help and messages of support.

The Banks Peninsula Community Board provided funding to have the building shored up for transportation and the R and N Wait Charitable Trust (proudly managed by Perpetual Guardian) funded the concept designs and costings report (by OCEL). The process of applying for heritage grants is well underway, and the group will launch a fundraising programme later this year.

This little building has had a colourful history.

1923 – The Boat House was built as the Club Rooms for the Canterbury Yacht and Motorboat Club

1950s Canterbury Yacht and Motorboat Club built new premises at Naval Point and the building was sold to the Sea Scouts.

The Boat House has changed hands a couple of times since then. For some time, it was used at the Club Rooms and sailing instruction rooms for the Dampier Bay Maritime Club and then the Dampier Bay Mooring Association.

In the early 2000s the building was purchased by four local people – Phil Fraser, Kevin Holden, David Lattimore, and Rob Gendall from Lyttelton Engineering. Unfortunately, only one of these four men is still alive, and ownership was passed to a number of custodians. The custodians recently agreed to transfer ownership to the Bays Boat House Group, on the condition that it goes to Governors Bay and that we put a plaque on the building recognising the efforts of those who saved the building before them.

In 2019 the building needed to be moved from its site for Te Ana Marina. It was moved to a holding site on LPC land. With pressure on the land, LPC needed the building removed and that's when Graham Batchelor put out the Facebook call to try to save the building. That's all past history now, and LPC has found another temporary storage site for the building until the team are able to transfer the building adjacent to Governors Bay jetty area, on the former site of Lionel Jefcoate's boat building shed.

When you visit Governors Bay next, take a walk down to the old jetty. The old piles and the skeleton slipway are still visible. They also tell an interesting story.

According to Jane Robertson in Head of the Harbour, Lionel Jefcoate approached the local Council in 1958 about setting up a boat-building shed and slipway near the long jetty in Governors Bay. With no more than a handshake, consent was given, and the shed was built. An annual rent of £10 was paid to the Council, and the same amount was paid to the harbour board as a slippage fee.

Lionel Jefcoate built many "incredible, world-class" wooden yachts in the shed, but eventually left Governors Bay and sold the shed to marine broker Steve Cunard in the early 1990s. On 4 May 2000, the shed was destroyed by a "spectacular blaze", and only the piles and skeleton of the slipway remain. Bays Boat House Trust Web Site

Te Ūaka The Lyttelton Museum AGM

Acting President and now President Peter Rough presented two reports to the attendees.

Here are a couple of the key points that he made.

He acknowledged all the work of Kerry McCarthy and the wonderful contribution she had made to the Museum and was delighted at the idea of a Memorandum of Understanding between the Museum Society and Ngāti Wheke.

Fundraising for the new museum is coming along well with a successful launch in February. This has since been followed up with a Quiz evening at LAF in May and the Cloak of Tiles campaign. In October an antarctic event is planned with well-known personality Te Radar coinciding with the "Days of Ice" festival.

He naturally thanked all the helpers and made particular mention of Lizzie Meek who stepped down from the committee for the new term.

With his Development Subcommittee "hat" he lamented that the resource consent for the re-build was still not approved.

The collection is the key asset of the museum. Quite a bit has happened over the year so we have chosen to publish Murry McGuigan's collection report in full.

2020-2021 Annual Report: Collections

The most significant piece of Collection-related work over this reporting period has been moving the Collection to new storage. As we reported at last year's Annual Meeting, the Air Force Museum approached us in late 2019 to inform us that they were expecting delivery of several very large collection items and our items would need to move from the Hangar space where they had been since 2016. As much space as we required would be made available on the tarmac immediately outside the hangars.

After an unsuccessful search for alternate locations that were affordable and offered the necessary protections for good object care, we opted to store the bulk of the collection in containers on the tarmac at the Air Force Museum. We purchased four non-functioning refrigerated units, choosing these because their insulation will help to maintain conditions at more stable levels than we could otherwise achieve in the absence of mechanical services for environmental control. We are extremely grateful to Kiwirail for waiving the significant cost of relocating the containers to Christchurch. A fifth, non-insulated container suitable for more robust items was donated by Lyttelton Port Company and delivered by NZ Express at no charge. I would like to acknowledge the stellar work of Lizzie Meek in sourcing these containers at a time when trade disruption due to the COVID-19 pandemic made obtaining them much more difficult than usual.

The objects suitable for storage in containers were moved in February and March, clearing the necessary space in the hangars. We have been permitted to retain a small footprint in one of the hangar side rooms to store boxed textile and paper objects, which are more susceptible to damage from changing environmental conditions. For the same reason, our collection of photographs will soon be relocated to storage at Iron Mountain limited, where we already maintain a small amount of shelf storage. Once again, we would like to extend our appreciation to the Air Force Museum of New Zealand for allowing us to use their tarmac and hangar spaces, and for providing the assistance and logistical expertise required to load the containers.

We had an excellent response to the images that we shared via eHive at the conclusion of the digitisation project. Comments continue to come in via that platform, helping us to identify people or situations in the images. We have also continued the LocalEyes series of online exhibitions, with Dr Margaret Bradshaw and Maree Henry joining our list of guest curators to select images from our collection that resonate with them

By necessity, our ability to accept new material into the collection remains limited while access to it is restricted. Despite this, we are thankful to those who continue to offer us objects. One notable permanent addition to the collection has been the Ships wheel from the Adderley. This item was on display in the old museum building, when it was on long term loan from the Wellington City Museum. It has since been transferred to our collection.

Additional work under way for SailGP

Improvements are being made to the Te Nukutai o Tapoa-Naval Point area to prepare for the SailGP racing series being held at Whakaraupō-Lyttelton Harbour in January 2022.

Christchurch City Council is assessing what work can be carried out to roads and pedestrian access ways it owns and manages to and from the site, as well as parking areas near the boat ramp.

This is likely to include a general tidy up to the road surface and shoulders on Godley Quay, with the aim of improving vehicle and pedestrian access from Te Ana Marina down to Naval Point.

The toilets next to the Lyttelton Information Centre, on Oxford Street, are also being upgraded. Design work is under way to reconfigure the inside of the toilet facilities, with work planned to start in October. The project will see the toilets become unisex and baby changing facilities included.

These projects are in addition to the almost $4 million the Council is spending on fast-tracking part of the parking area phase of the Naval Point Development Plan, adopted in November 2020, to make sure the site is ready for racing. An ageing water main has already been replaced, while utilities are being upgraded and foreshore improvements made. All work is being funded through existing budgets.

Temporary infrastructure – such as toilets, grandstands, staging and marquees – required to host the event are being provided by SailGP, as the event organiser.

Some residents have raised concerns in the past about cars being driven unsafely at Naval Point and the Council wants to discourage this type of behaviour once part of the parking area is sealed.

Christchurch City Council Head of Parks Andrew Rutledge says a number of cameras have been installed onsite at Naval Point to help minimise vandalism and unsafe vehicle use.

“Signage has gone up to let people know there are cameras monitoring activity. We also encourage residents to contact the police if they see unsafe behaviour.”

SailGP will be a ticketed event, with a comprehensive traffic management plan (TMP) currently being worked on detailing how residents, workers and spectators will be able to access Lyttelton, Naval Point and the wider harbour communities.

Emergency vehicle access to Lyttelton will be maintained at all times and safety evacuation procedures are being developed as part of the event and the plan. The Council will review the plan once submitted and is working closely with partner agencies to make sure lessons learnt from previous events in Lyttelton are incorporated and there will be a functioning transport network during SailGP. The impacts of the traffic management plan will be shared with the community in the months leading up to the event, so there is plenty of time to plan access to and from the area over the racing period.

Article CCC Newsline

Lyttelton Harbour and Otago Harbour share a volcanic origin and also many species, so I hope this poem speaks to those who live beside Whakaraupō

Otago Harbour

Between Aramoana and Taiaroa Head, Tangaroa enters the womb of the harbour.

Calm and still the water covers the sandbanks, hiding the volcanic basin which once spewed blocks of basalt,

Now nesting places of the spotted shag and couches for resting seals.

Oystercatchers, pied stilts and grey heron stand on long legs silent in the morning light.

They watch for crabs and worms, for small fish that dart in the shallow water:

All members of this harbour-community, rich in its diversity, share the water, the air, and one another, as they greet the new day

Surely they sense their relationship, are aware of those around them, yet without apparent communication.

A local walks her dog along the road and the birds rise as one, circling the bay before settling further along the water's edge, except for the heron who flaps lazily away.

200 years ago those who came from afar saw only oil, meat, skins, trade.

Now left in peace the seals and birds reclaim the sacred space, watched over by Hereweka, renamed Harbour Cone.

Only the fish and shell fish, abundant and more remote ancestors to the people of Otakou and Portabello, are enjoyed as kaimoana after a respectful karakia..

The day wears on, each bird, each fish, each mammal, each crawling thing, is fully occupied with its own activities, yet always with time for rest and quiet.

The harbour is enough, each life lived as a celebration of the whole the Cosmos, the source of all being.

Now the sky is tinged with red behind the hills of Ravensbourne, and a skein of shags with steady wing beat returns to the roost,

While the little blue penguins, unseen in the dusk, scuttle up the beach, caterwauling to their chicks, snug in the burrows. The energy, that is the tide, ebbs out into the ocean, where albatross glide close over the waves.

Book Review – Juliet Adams

David Suzuki: the autobiography 2006 David Suzuki

The author is famous for his work worldwide on environmental matters, as well as acknowledging and supporting indigenous peoples around the world. He has worked in public media for years, and is particularly famous for the long-running Canadian TV series "The Nature of Things" where he focused on both the natural environment and the issues facing indigenous people, having suffered racism as a Japanese-born Canadian in the 1940's. He faced reality and devoted his life to science and educating the public. His worldwide travels in these fields, as a writer and broadcaster, earned him much respect. He worked with various communities, strengthening them in the face of the damaging issues they faced. His family worked with him, his daughter Severn also becoming famous for her address at the Rio Summit in 1992. (Maybe she inspired Greta Thunberg.) His approach to environmental matters was inspiring – a pity more of us did not follow his advice.

This book is fascinating, as he describes issues of society, nature, politics, economics, and his personal involvement in all of them. It is well-written for the average reader, not too technical, and full of warmth.

Canterbury Museum Funding to benefit Stoddart Cottage

Canterbury's taonga (treasures) will be safer and more accessible thanks to a funding project from the Manatū Taonga Ministry of Culture and Heritage supporting the Canterbury Museum. The funding aims to help up to 40 of the region's heritage organisations improve the care of their collections.

Locally Stoddart Cottage in Diamond Harbour is going to get some assistance.

The Stoddart Cottage Trust cares for a collection of artefacts connected to the Stoddart family, including books, photo albums, documents, wallpaper fragments, household objects and original artworks. The Trust will get some support to help them optimise the conditions under which our community treasures are stored or displayed, given their limited space, volunteer capacity and finance.

SailGP - On Water Volunteers Request

Hi all,
I have just been appointed as the Local Engagement & Event Manager for SailGP.

I am on the lookout for some on-water Volunteers and thought you might be interested? I am starting to get a better idea of what skills will be required, and I wanted to pass them on to you to see if you are keen to take part and if you know any other people who might like to join in.

My task at the moment is to find some volunteer course Marshalls and boats.

They are hoping to have around 10 boats on the water acting as course Marshalls, and have two people in each boat, and a few people as back-up.

The volunteers will need to have at least Boatmaster or Day Skipper (or have some other official qualification to at least that standard or better). You will also need to have your VHF license.

If you are keen to come on board but haven't yet done your training, I would recommend you do Boatmaster, and the MSROC VHF course, as both of these are also useful to have if you ever go overseas. Day Skipper and normal VHF is fine too if you just want to tick the box, but probably a bit basic if you have already spent a lot of time on the water, and if you are going to spend the time and money to do it, then best to up-spec.

VHF MSROC - <https://www.boatingeducation.org.nz/courses/62/maritime-short-range-operator-certificate-msroc/>
Boatmaster - <https://www.boatingeducation.org.nz/courses/2/boatmaster/>

You can do both online or in person. There is an in-person course for Boatmaster here in Christchurch coming up in October.

In addition to this you will be given training just prior to the Event, by both the Harbourmaster, and also the SailGP Chief Marshall, and get some general Health & Safety preparation too. You will be trained as Honorary Enforcement Officers for the event and will have delegated authority of the Harbourmaster to usher boats around. SailGP have all their own chase boats for taking care of the race boats and sailors, but your role will be looking after all the people who are out on the water watching the event.

In addition to the actual race days where you'll have ringside seats on the water to watch all the action, you will get the opportunity to rub shoulders with the SailGP team and hopefully get involved with all the other things going on leading up to the racing. There is a powhiri planned at Rapaki on Thursday where they'll need some help with ferrying the team from the boats to the shore and I am sure lots of other things. Plus you'll get something super cool to put on your CV and first dibs on helping out again next time!

The on-water dates will be Thursday 27 - Sunday 30 January. And I am hoping we can do the training on the weekend before that - so the 22-23 of January.

We also need Marshall boats - and they'll need to have a check to make sure they comply with some basic Health & Safety requirements - kill-cords, first aid kits, anchor, etc. I'll find out more about those requirements soon. Fuel will be provided.

Keen to hear your thoughts.

LEARNING EXCHANGE EVENT

FABULOUS FUNGI

Autumn is the time of year when the West Coast rain and humidity makes a stroll through the bush one of appreciation for the miraculous beauty of nature, specifically fungi.

Photographer Lesley Towart has captured images detailing the diversity and vibrancy of this fascinating world. You'll see colourful jellies that would look great on a cake, corals that could live in the ocean, as well as a bizarre shaped stinkhorn with the stench of rotting flesh.

Share her appreciation and passion for this sometimes weird, often muddy and always fabulous, world of fungi.

Mike King at The Loons

Lyttelton Port Company, Lyttelton Branch of the Maritime Union of New Zealand and the Lyttelton Rugby Club are proud to be bringing mental health advocate Mike King to Lyttelton.

About Mike's life-changing presentation:

The biggest problem facing our people right now is an overactive inner critic. That's the voice inside all of our heads that has us second-guessing everything we do, the voice of doubt that beats us up and tells us we're failures, that we're substandard, and even worthless. Having an overactive inner critic is not a sign of mental illness, it's a sign that we are normal. If we want to help those who are suffering from mental illness get to a better place, then we are going to have to start talking openly about our own problems. We need to lead by example. That's especially important when it comes to our kids. If our young people see adults talking openly about their problems then guess what? They'll start talking openly about their problems. They will also understand that having a tough time doesn't mean they are mentally ill. Let's take better care of each other.

Entry is free however we encourage you to make a small entry koha / donation to the Lyttelton Rugby Club to support their work around wellbeing.

This is an alcohol-free event however non-alcoholic beverages will be available to purchase, and nibbles will be provided.

COVID-19: If you are experiencing any flu-like or respiratory symptoms, please do not attend this event.
